The son of Frank and Pearl (Fogelsong) Kreiman. He was an only child. He was raised in the badlands north of Lindsay, where he ranched his entire life. His parents moved their house on the divide to his Uncle Walter's place so Allan could attend school easier. He attended school at the rural Bradbury School and Deml School. During the bad winters of '34 and '35, Allan attended school in Glendive and Sidney, Montana, a year ('36) in Fort Peck, Montana; while his dad worked on the dam and graduated high school from the Dawson County High School in Glendive. He worked for an outfitter near Lincoln, Montana in '48 and '49 packing in elk hunters and supplies. He married Nellie Mae Mann on June 22, 1950 at her home in Hamilton, Montana. They had four children. Nancy Albertson of Longview, Texas, Dale (Glenda) Kreiman of Lindsay, Gary (Angie) Kreiman of Lindsay and Shirley Kreiman of Glendive; nine grandchildren, Tim (Sarah) Albertson, Larry (Jill) Albertson, Crystal (Bill) Zink, Forrest (Jill) Kreiman, Fern (Tim) Wyrick, Field (Lucy) Kreiman, Ivy Kreiman, Abby Kreiman and Tanner Kreiman and seven great-grandchildren, Jordan Larson, TaiLynne Keyes, Kylie Kreiman, MaKayl Kreiman, Caleb Wyrick, Joshua Wyrick and Nathan Wyrick. Allan loved working and the ranch was not only his livelihood, but also his passion. He enjoyed fixing fence and feeding cows. He was a good steward of the land that God entrusted him with. He was a man who served God and walked with Him daily encouraging his family with his faith. Sundays were a day to spend in God's house. Although generally quite reserved he liked taking part in Bible studies. He loved the outdoors. He loved to visit the mountains and streams. He greatly enjoyed fishing and hunting. He liked to do rock work and cut agates. He listened to western music from the '40's and '50's and especially liked gospel quartets. He liked to ride horse and often said that was one thing he missed the most when he wasn't physically able to do it anymore. I'm sure God has a range reserved for this Montana Cowboy.
