“ Kenny shared many stories while camping, his favorite pastime. He shared how the school teacher back in the day lived in several students' homes throughout the school year. He said he hated when the teacher lived with him because he had to hitch the horses so the teacher could ride the buggy to school. He had to start the wood stove before everyone got there.

His " How to get free bait tip? He told me how he and his buddies got nightcrawlers for bait. He said he used welding equipment to transfer electricity into the ground at the Dawson County High School football field. The worms came up by the bucketfuls.

He survived spending the night in sub-freezing temperatures while out hunting. I can't remember how he got lost. I believe from an unexpected storm. He lost some toes from frostbite but never complained.

He loved his squirrels. He built squirrel feeders so the critters had to learn how to open the feeders. He would sit on his porch with his beloved Bev, watching his squirrels play, nap, and feed. He even rescued and adopted a baby squirrel, naming him Wilbur. Wilbur's favorite place to nap was in Bev's shirt. I love you, Miss Bev.

“ Kenny and Dick were the Studebaker crew in high school and kept the friendship alive through the years. Makoshika hijinks and camping over the decades. Pulling each other out of trouble a time or two. Frick and Frack as Bev would say. If one of them didn't think of it the other one would. Good bye friend
